Most managers and employees have long known that harassment based on sex, race, or other personal characteristics is not only illegal but can also destroy reputations and careers, not to mention the ability of people to work effectively in an atmosphere of professionalism and respect. But the #MeToo movement has made clear that the problem remains, and this program will explain boundaries and expectations that all managers and employees must respect in very clear and direct terms. You will have the chance to ask your own questions about where the lines are and how to handle difficult and sensitive situations

Please contact Sandy Caudill with any questions. No shows will be invoiced for training, however, substitutions are always welcome.
